Re: Mobile County Metro Jail
Today's Exit Interview with Department of Justice

Dear Commissioner Carl:

The Department of Justice (DoJ) and three subject-matter consultants inspected the Jail and reviewed Jail operations in September.

We had a telephonic exit interview with the lead DoJ attorney and the three subject-matter consultants this morning. Two issues described as serious and emergent were discussed, and because of the emergent nature of those issues it is necessary that I bring them to your attention so that necessary remedial action can be taken as soon as possible.

First issue: Suicide hazard in 402 Wedge

This is the wedge where female inmates that are at risk for suicide are housed. The subject-matter consultants identified several hazards within the individual cells that create "5 or 6 ways" for an inmate to attempt suicide. Those hazards include electrical outlets, fixed bars, vent holes, coat hooks, and broken sinks with jagged edges. Several of these physical features create a hanging point. The fixtures in these cells are also leaking water on the floors.

I verified the existence of these hazards this morning, and photographs are enclosed.

The subject-matter consultants made these same hazards known several years ago, and noted this morning that they are unresolved. The DoJ attorney noted the seriousness of the failure to resolve.

Because of the serious and emergent nature of these hazards, we are requesting that appropriate remedial action be taken immediately. This will necessarily require the involvement of County maintenance staff and possibly independent contractors.

Second issue: Shower curtains

The consultants noted that the opaque shower curtains throughout the Jail extend from floor to ceiling and are held in place by a rigid bar. These curtains and bars are shown in three of the photographs that are enclosed.

The floor to ceiling curtains create an issue in that inmate(s) could slip behind a curtain and remain unseen by correctional staff. The rigid bars create a hanging point. This is particularly serious in the suicide wedges and in the medical wedges, as noted by the consultants during the exit interview. The consultants noted that these hazards are serious and emergent throughout the jail, and they emphasized the emergent need for remedial action in the suicide and medical wedges.

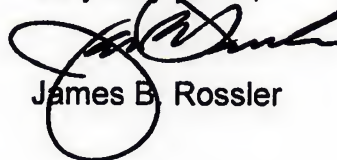

Potential fixes for this include: installation of privacy panels, that block only the inmate's torso but allow observation of areas below the knees and above the shoulders; and removal of the rigid bars and use of shower curtains that are held by velcro straps.

Because of the serious and emergent nature of these hazards, we are requesting that appropriate remedial action be taken. We are also requesting that these hazards be addressed immediately in the suicide wedges and the medical wedges.

Please let me know if you have any questions or need any further information.

With highest regards, I remain,

Very truly yours,

James B. Rossler
